

Report BDIAP symposium lower GI pathology

My name is Sanne Vermorgen. I'm a trainee from Radboudumc in Nijmegen in the Netherlands. Currently I'm in the final year (year 5) of my training. Since I have special interest in GI pathology and brain pathology, I was excited to have the opportunity to attend the BDIAP symposium on lower GI pathology in London. This BDIAP event was an excellent opportunity to expand my knowledge, with a lot of esteemed speakers and a variety of interesting topics. My expectations to learn a lot about recent updates of guidelines and tips and tricks from practice were definitely met. Especially the case presentations were fun and educational. I particularly enjoyed the presentation of my colleague from Nijmegen prof. Dr. Iris Nagtegaal, about tumor budding and the impressive research achievements of her team on this topic. Also the presentations about the many forms of drug-induced colitis were an eye-opener, with valuable messages towards daily practice. Networking opportunities were plenty. I hope to attend the BDIAP symposium for many years in the future and would highly recommend it to other trainees and practicing pathologists.
